Subject : Golf schools

Dear Thomas,

Thanks for inviting me to dinner last Monday. I had a great time, and the food at the restaurant was delicious. It was interesting to hear about your new job. Your suggestion of joining a golf class together was a really good one. I'd like to start as soon as possible, so I've been doing some research on the Internet.

There are two schools that I'm interested in. The first, called Popo School, offers golf classes on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. The school is on the south side of town, so it would be easy to go there after work. The second is Max Golf School. It's also close to our offices, and it offers two golf classes a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays. But the classes start at 7 p.m., which is less convenient because it might be difficult to get there on time after work.

Could you let me know in the next few days which school you would prefer? Then I'll call that school to find out if we can join the class. Both schools offer the first lesson for free, so we can try it out to see whether we like it or not.

Talk to you soon,

Emma

Donkeys look very much like horses, but they are smaller in size and have long ears. They are hard-working and very strong. (A) this, people have used donkeys for thousands of years to pull carts and to carry things. The Italian island of Sicily is one place where donkeys used to be very important. Many towns on the island are built on hills and have narrow streets, so donkeys were especially (あ) there. Of course, by the end of the 20th century, most Sicilians were using cars and trucks (B) donkeys. But recently, a small town in Sicily called Castelbuono has returned to using “donkey power” for its garbage collection.

Until February 2007, four trucks were used to collect Castelbuono’s garbage. Then Mario Cicero, the town’s mayor, introduced a new system. He (い) the four trucks with six donkeys. Each donkey carries two wooden boxes on its back. The donkeys are led through the town by garbage collectors, who place people’s garbage in the boxes.

Cicero believes that the donkeys will help the town to save money. A new garbage truck costs about $43,000 to buy, (C) a donkey is only $1,700. The cost of keeping a donkey is also lower. Cicero says that the town used to spend $11,000 per year on gas and repairs for each truck. On the other hand, the cost of feeding and looking after a donkey for one year is only $2,900. Donkeys are also better for the (う). They don’t create pollution or cause traffic jams when they stop in the streets. It seems likely that other small towns in Italy will soon follow Castelbuono’s example.

5 次の英文を読み、下記の質問に答えなさい。

American Robert Ballard loves exploring the bottom of oceans and seas to learn more about history.

① He was the first person to find the remains of the *Titanic, as well as several other famous ships that sank. The year 2000 was an especially exciting one for Ballard, who explored the bottom of the Black Sea.

In September he found parts of an old wooden house about 95 meters below the Black Sea. The house was probably built over 7,500 years ago, and it proves that people lived near the coast at that time. The fact that the house was found under the sea also suggests that a large flood might have covered the area around the Black Sea shortly after the house was built. This is also supported by the research of William Ryan and Walter Pitman, two American scientists. They discussed this theory in their recent book, Noah's Flood.

Not long after his discovery of the old house, Ballard found four ships at the bottom of the Black Sea. The ships are more than 1,500 years old. Three of the ships were carrying large numbers of pots used to hold wine, oil, or honey. ② This means that they were probably trading ships. Ballard was surprised by the good condition of the ships. Usually, ancient ships are found in very bad condition because tiny animals, called borers, eat the wood. But the bottom of the Black Sea has no oxygen*, so there are no borers. Ballard believes that there may be many more ancient ships on the bottom of the sea.

Scientists are excited by Ballard's discoveries. They look forward to future discoveries on the bottom of the Black Sea, an environment that naturally protects important pieces of world history.
